

When was your last inhaler review?

Have you been contacted by your healthcare team about a review? We're looking at ways that you can manage your condition more effectively and which also help the planet.

Getting it right for you

There are many types of inhalers available, the right one for you will control your symptoms best.

Helping you & the planet

That means it also reduces the number of puffs you need to take and that means a reduction of carbon.

Here to help

It might take a couple of tries to get it right. Stay in touch with your healthcare team who can support you.

Return and check

Remember inhalers should be returned to your pharmacy - not put in your bin and its worth checking your cupboards to ensure you only ask for a new inhaler when needed.
